

Jet Class Newsletter

19.05.2017

Hooray! Jet class have completed all their SATs tests this week; the children have all been amazing. They have definitely been using their Diamond and ELLI powers during the tests. Well done Jet class, we are very proud of you all.

What have we been learning?

We have been busy continuing our writing based on the story of 'Trust me, Jack's Beanstalk stinks!' The children wrote detailed book reviews, sharing their views on the plot and characters and explaining how the book made them feel. They have also been writing diary entries as the Giant, explaining the sequence of events involving Jack. We can't wait to share them with you.

In science we have been investigating, growing and observing plants in our local environment and recording our findings. In maths we have been developing our data handling skills through constructing and interpreting bar charts, tally charts and pictograms.

Next Week

Jet class will be looking at the work of Vincent Van Gogh, focusing on his paintings of sunflowers. We will be creating our own interpretations of his sunflower painting, exploring colour, shape and tones.

In English the children will be writing a persuasive letter from either Jack or the Giant to convince a judge about who was in the wrong in the story.

The children will also be studying the work of the artist Georgia O'Keefe and creating their own flower sketches.

Other news

A quick reminder to check if your child still has learning to complete on Bug Club and mathematics. We will not be issuing any more books or learning this week so children have the chance to complete all assigned learning.

Skipping event on Friday 19th May. If you want to purchase a skipping rope you can on the day. Children's ropes are £4 each.
