What have we been learning?

We are still enjoying being in the continent of Africa. We have been thinking over the last few weeks about how an animal adapts to its habitat and what it needs to survive. This week we have been thinking about an African food chain. We had great fun wearing the food crown to place ourselves into the correct place. Why don't you ask us to tell you what the energy source is in the food chain or the primary consumer?

We have also been artists, trying to paint in the style of Leroy Neiman, we have been thinking about tints and tones and using a 'tickling' technique with the paintbrush to create the effect. We have brought the lions to life by adding their manes. Look out for them soon!!

Next Week

Next week, we are moving onto our next continent, we are off to visit North America.

We will be writing riddles about different North American animals and word processing these.

We will be learning about the Native Americans, and to expand on our mathematics we will be using repeated patterns to create headbands.
