Extracts of some of the amazing recounts of our trip to Imperial War Museum, London.

On Tuesday 2nd October, Amethyst embarked on their trip to the Imperial War Museum at the most outrageous time-7am! We went to the IWM to discover what life was like in the trenches.

When we finally arrived at the museum, we stared wide-eyed at the big artillery guns, as we disembarked from the coach. A ripple of excitement passed through the class as we entered through the main entrance and into the beautiful museum. Spitfires hung from the sky, tanks sat proud on the ground-it was stunning!

Once we had put our bags away, we started to look around all the WW1 exhibits. I loved seeing all the wonderful artefacts from WW1. Quite a few people were interested in one particular exhibit: A chance to see if you were tall enough, fit enough and if you had good enough teeth to be in the army! There were only two people tall enough from our class.

More photos of our trip will be on the website by next week in our class photo section.
