This Week:

Please note that our Home-learning share will be at 3:00pm on 9/3/18

This week we have been delving into the depths of storywriting. The children have been building their descriptions, applying their learning of prepositions and have been applying their non-standard English to speech between Om (the Stone Age girl) and themselves.

In Maths, we have been talking cake! Fractions have been everywhere and we can now identify different fractions and their denominators and numerators as well as comparing them to see which is the biggest. Some of the children are already reasoning their method, explaining how they compare and identify different fractions.

Alice and Mrs Arrowsmith were trying to figure out which piece of cake would be the biggest for Jack to eat. The class were all cheering Alice on with her problem-solving.

We have also been plotting ancient history timelines. The children have loved learning about Stone Age people and how they evolved.
