Crystal Class Newsletter:

Home learning grids have been sent home. I have explained the grid to the children and they all seem very excited to get started. Next week, there will be young voices on Tuesday 21st January. Myself, Miss Edgar, Mrs McAleese and Mrs Gee shall be attending. For those children who shall not be attending, a sports coach has been booked to take the children for the rest of the day. Could we please ensure that all PE kits are in school (particularly outdoor PE kits)?

This week:

In English this week, the children have been continuing to learn about inverted commas and we have now progressed on to different types of adverbs. It was lovely to see how much they were able to remember.

In Maths, we have been learning about multiplication and division. The children have been using arrays to support their calculations and they have progressed on to problem solving.

In our project the children have begun to learn the chronology of the Stone Age – this certainly opened up an interesting discussion and they all seem genuinely fascinated! A great start to the project.

As part of our year of citizenship, the children had a drama workshop where they learnt about 'stereotyping'.
