

Diamond Class Newsletter

We had a brilliant day at the Ashmolean Museum just before half term, and becoming detectives to explore a range of artefacts in the galleries. It was great to see many examples of items we have been learning about, for example canopic jars and coffins with painted hieroglyphs.

In English this week we have been learning how to punctuate direct speech accurately and have been discussing what we've learnt about the characters in our class book 'The Ancient Egypt Sleepover' in preparation for writing our own stories.

In maths we have been looking at decimal numbers, partitioning them into tenths and hundredths and placing them correctly on number lines.

Our topic learning this week has been focused on the River Nile and its importance to the Ancient Egyptians. We have created excellent maps of Ancient Egypt featuring the Nile and other key places and have learnt about the role the Nile played in the lives of people in Ancient Egypt.
