What have we been learning?

This week the children have developed skills in writing to recap using capital letters, full stops and using the conjunction 'and'. We have started to discuss different ways we can help the animals in the ocean. We won't tell you too much as our big blue day will reveal all.

As it is anti-bullying this week the children have discussed what it is and who we can go to if something is bothering us at home or in school. They have also enjoyed designing peer critiquing and painting their pebbles with shapes and symbols that represent what makes them unique in the style of a fish from the book 'only one you'. The pebbles will be placed along the walkways into school!

NOTE: Our reading challenge has begun! If the children read five times a week they can move their caterpillar up the tree to try and reach the butterfly. Reading could involve phonic learning in purple home books, reading school or home book, sharing a book with family, bug club etc. Any form of reading is fine as long as it is written in the orange reading record.

Mental Maths: One more than

Example: Can you say one more than any number? Adult: 62 Child: 63

Next Week

The children will be using the information we research about helping save the ocean to put into a leaflet and will begin exploring subtraction in maths. We will continue to learn about what different animals eat.
