Learning this week

Our classroom has been transformed into Frozen Land over the weekend. The children were really excited to see it on Monday morning. We have already been helping Olaf because he loved our classroom but he didn't have any friends. We decided that we could paint some friends for him.

We had a visit from the Road Safety team this week. They talked to us about holding hands with a grown up near the road, especially in the dim light that we have been having recently.

In shape, space and measures we have started to explore measures. At home you could help by using the words long, longer, short, shorter in the right context. We will continue to link this to our learning next week.

In numbers we have been exploring one less than and started to think about calculations.

Sleep toolkit

I have had sleep conversations with some people over the last few weeks. There is lots of research about the importance of sleep for good learning so I am including a link to the sleep toolkit. I would be interested to know of any improvements after using this so please let me know.

Christmas Play

We want the children to have fun with this so we don't start too soon and don't sit too much! There are some costumes in school but some people will have notes to ask you to look for some added items at home. If you have problems with this, let us know.

Kind regards,

Sally Windmill
